"In our sixth year detailing Taylor Morrison's corporate responsibility initiatives, we've realized that Sustainability and Belonging fully capture the ideals we hold dear as a business and resonate with our guiding principles, reflecting this report's new name," said Taylor Morrison Chairman and CEO Sheryl Palmer. "We remain steadfast that operating sustainably, building belonging and holding ourselves accountable is core to who we are as a homebuilder and we are always mindful of our enduring role in creating communities that leave lasting impressions."

Key milestones within the Sustainability and Belonging Report showcasing Taylor Morrison's transformative corporate responsibility journey include:

- A more robust assessment of the Company's carbon footprint, spanning additional emissions categories to provide a more complete inventory of Taylor Morrison's scope 1, 2, and 3 greenhouse gas emissions.
- A 10 percent improvement in Taylor Morrison's average Home Energy Rating System (HERS®) score since 2020, reflecting progress in increasing energy efficiency and reducing operational greenhouse gas emissions of Taylor Morrison's homes. Taylor Morrison reported an average home score of 57, compared to 100 for a typical home built to 2006 energy efficiency standards.
- Continued focus on protecting biodiversity and wildlife in communities while educating homeowners on conservation efforts through an exclusive partnership with the National Wildlife Federation (NWF). Since 2019, Taylor Morrison has installed 100 certified monarch butterfly gardens and protected nearly 9,000 acres of Certified Wildlife Habitat®.
- Enhanced tools to make purchasing a Taylor Morrison home more accessible for the Company's increasingly diverse customer base, including a new language services platform, pricing transparency on the digital home reservation system and floor plans with inclusive design principles, such as Vatsu Shastra or Feng Shui.
- Developing a greater culture of belonging by promoting teamwork, civility and respect with subcommittees and employee leadership in each division.
- Continued leadership in gender diversity across all areas of business. In a traditionally male-dominated industry, Taylor Morrison boasts an equal male-to-female ratio on its board of directors, the highest in the industry, and an overall workforce comprised of 44 percent women, four times the construction industry average of 11 percent according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Taylor Morrison's disclosures align with the material topics highlighted by the Sustainability Accounting Standards Board (SASB), the Global Reporting Initiative (GRI), the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the Task Force on Climate-Related Financial Disclosures (TCFD). Taylor Morrison also holds several national accolades for its commitment to sustainability, including Newsweek's America's Most Responsible Companies since 2022 and America's Greenest Companies since 2023.
