WHATS NEW

CrowdGather Delivers a Solid Quarter, Will Apply to a Major Exchange

On March 3rd the firm closed a private placement transaction previously announced on February 28, 2011. Under the terms of the transaction CrowdGather sold an aggregate of approximately 7,136,364 million shares of its common stock at $1.10 per share and warrants to purchase up to approximately 5,352,273 million additional shares of its common stock. The warrants to purchase additional shares will be exercisable at an exercise price of $1.50 per share and are exercisable for 5 years commencing six months and one day following their issue date.

Looking Closer at Dilution

With the acquisition of Adisn and Lefora the firm essentially leveraged $6.5 million in equity in exchange for an increase in revenues and page views. That stake will not be dilutive given the cancellation of 5 million shares of CEO, Sanjay Sabnani's beneficial holdings in Crowd Gather. Investors that buy the stock today are essentially getting a firm that is debt free, growing page views at 750% (12 million to 90 million), revenues at over 400%, and has not suffered dilution.

On December 1st 2010 the firm announced results for the second quarter of Fiscal 2011 ended October 31, 2010. CRWG reported record revenues of $462,925 for the second quarter of fiscal 2011, an increase of 697% from the $58,061 reported for the second quarter of fiscal 2010. This increase was primarily attributable to the revenues generated from current fiscal year acquisitions.

The net loss for the second quarter of fiscal 2011 was $711,272, or $(0.02) per diluted share, compared to a net loss of $471,082, or $(0.02) per diluted share, for the second quarter of fiscal 2010 and was primarily related to a $301,833 increase in the firms non-cash charges for stock-based compensation from $161,000 to $462,833 in each of the comparable quarters for fiscal years 2010 and 2011, respectively.

INVESTMENT THESIS

CrowdGather, Inc. is an Internet company that specializes in the development and hosting of forum based Web sites. It monetizes a network of online forums and message boards to engage, provide information to, and build community around users. The company is in the process of building social, advertising, and user generated content networks by consolidating existing groups of online users that post on message boards and forums. Its forum communities connect people sharing their questions, expertise, and experiences. The company holds approximately 70 Web properties hosting around 44,000 forum communities, as well as a portfolio of 300 domain names. The firm has three areas of expertise.

Premium Communities

CrowdGather acquires forums and provides them with high-quality infrastructure, software and services. Their destination forums allow for precise, targeted campaigns crafted along their verticals and command higher than market level CPMs. CrowdGather retains full control of advertising on these highly trafficked sites. Leading sites include:

Premium Communities	Targeted Vertical
Ngemu.com	Software emulators
Nsider2.com	Nintendo enthusiast community
GenMay.com	Off-topic and humor
Anythingbutipod.com	Consumer electronics media player community
AquaticPlantCentral.com	Aquascapes
Clubxb.com	Scion xB owner community
DemocracyForums.com	Politics
ABXZone.com	Computer help
Zealot.com	Hobby enthusiast forum
MotorcycleForum.com	Motorcycles
Pocketbikeplanet.com	Mini-bike owner society
Wiispace.com	Nintendo Wii enthusiast community
ZuneBoards.com	Microsoft Zune community

Forum Hosting
It also allows third-party forum owners to build their own forums for free on its proprietary free forum hosting platform; in exchange CrowdGather places advertising on these forums or offers subscription based ad-free forum creation and hosting options. There are thousands of sites in this network and it is conducive to cost-effective, large-scale ad campaigns. The primary forum hosting sites owned by CrowdGather are:

- Lefora.com
- Freeforums.org
- Freepowerboards.com
- Makeforums.org
- Eamped.com

Advertising
In coordination with ADISN, CrowdGather's digital media agency, CrowdGather aggregates forums into key verticals to provide brand marketers relevant channels for their advertising including rich-media solutions and campaign analytics. ADISN'sexpertise in targeted dynamic campaigns combined with CrowdGather's expert knowledge in site aggregation and demographic targeting guarantees a brand marketer's message reaches receptive enthusiasts in their network and beyond.

CrowdGather intellectual property assets include domain names and websites; trademarks related to its brands, products and services; copyrights in software and creative content; trade secrets; and other intellectual property rights and licenses of various kinds. The firm also currently owns the web domain www.crowdgather.com, which serves as the corporate website and the future home of its new forum software platform which is currently in development. The CRWG portfolio currently consists of over 300 domain names and approximately 44,000 message board communities at various stages of development.

Forums are unique
People are there precisely to discuss products or services, even specific brands. They pose questions to the community, ask for guidance or simply look to connect with people who share their passions. The audience is primed and ready for – even actively seeking – product-specific messages.

Forums remain a much undervalued piece of the internet advertising sales puzzle partly because advertisers in the past have been fearful of hate speech or other noise emanating from a few negative posts. CrowdGather reduces this risk by bringing enthusiasts together in narrowed down niche markets in the Gaming and Entertainment, Technology, and Leisure and Lifestyle areas. For instance members of Ironmass.com, a body building forum, are more likely to talk about training, nutrition, and equipment than engage in hate speech or other noise. CrowdGather then uses Google Ad Sense to sell advertising to members of the forum.

Forums remain a much undervalued piece of the internet advertising sales puzzle in part because of fear of negative feedback to a particular brand or company. However, many companies are changing their approach with the advent of social media and there is an increasing interest to listen to consumers and a value placed on the feedback through forums and message boards.[1]68%[2] of active social media users are increasing their use of message boards as a means to communicate on specific topics or to provide feedback and reviews on products or companies. In addition, CrowdGather mitigates the risk of negative brand feedback by providing oversight of their sites.

Those who contribute to online forums are[3]:

- 10 times more likely than non-contributors to also publish a blog.
- 9 times more likely to take an active role in organizing events or meet-ups for group that originally met online.
- 3.5 times more likely to proactively recommend a particular purchase to someone else
- 3.5 times more likely to share links about new products
- 4 times more likely to post online ratings and reviews, and almost twice as likely to share advice -- offline and in person -- based on information they had read online.
- Of the top 20 social networking sites in 2009, 2 of them are message boards: Yahoo Message Boards and Gaiaonline.com.[4]
- 2217% of US Internet users read message boards daily, compared to 11% of US Internet users that read blogs daily[5], 8% that watch videos online and only 6% who use Twitter daily.

With 50 billion posts and 300 million members worldwide,[6] community forums are 5 times larger than the blogosphere. According to Internet Brands user generated content sites are valued at $27 billion and forums represent $4.8 billion of this. CrowdGather remains the only public company dedicated to monetizing this opportunity. Forums have very high leverage and require very little upkeep since nearly all of the content is user generated. Further, the sites are generally staffed by volunteers.

Demographics

The firm has very valuable demographics with

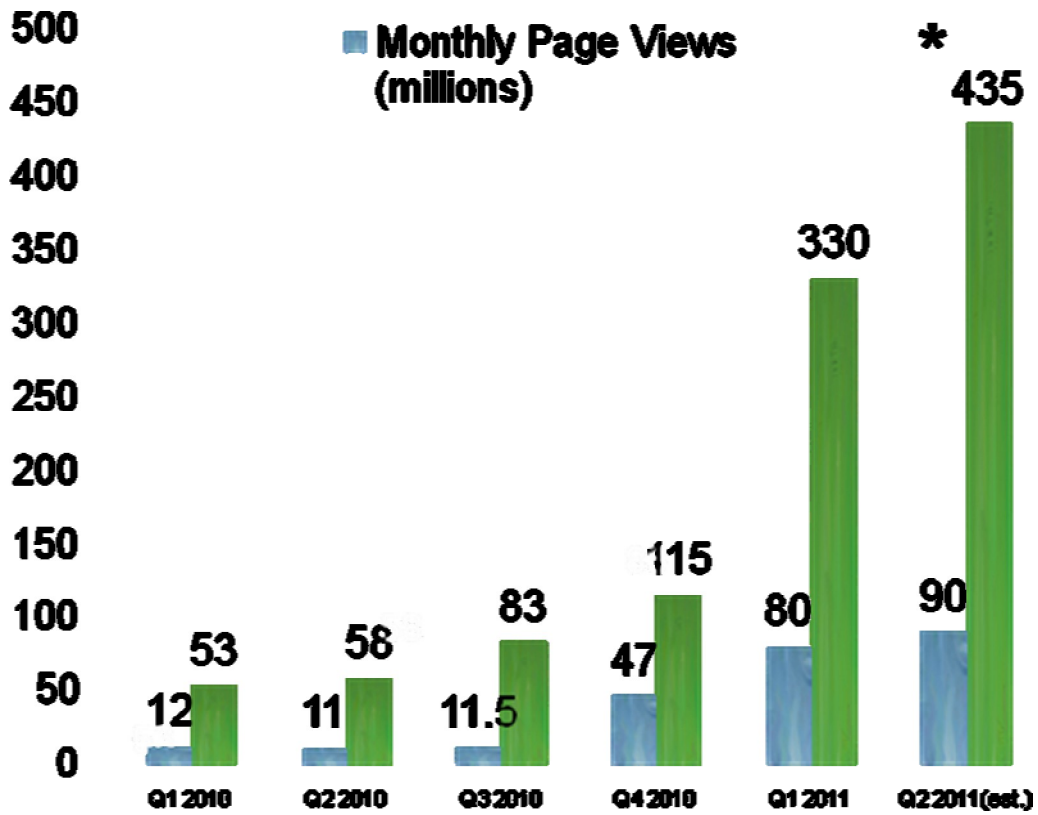

- 67% Male.
- 45% Age 18-34
- 42% Age 35+
- 38% Have Children
- 47% College or Grad School Educated

FreeForums
On March 12, 2010, CRWG entered into a website and domain name acquisition agreement with Phil Santoro in which it acquired the website, www.freeforums.org. The total purchase price of the Websites was $1,000,000, which consisted of cash and stock. The Agreement also provides for payment of conditional traffic bonus compensation in the form of an additional $200,000 payable to Santoro in shares of common stock, if, during the following twelve months, the average monthly visitor traffic to the Websites is greater than or equal to 59.13 million monthly page views, as measured by Google analytics.

Adisn
On June 10th 2010 CRWG announced that it acquired Adisn, a next generation Digital Ad Agency that uses relationship data from the social web to enhance targeting, for $5.5 million, the largest acquisition in CrowdGather's history. CrowdGather will issue 4,621,849 shares of common stock for the purchase. Adisn will operate as a wholly owned subsidiary of the Company. Adisn negotiates advertising rates with its customers and then purchases ad inventory from real-time advertising exchanges and online publishers at a lower cost, thus capturing the difference as net revenues. CrowdGather's unfilled ad inventory will also provide zero cost advertising inventory for Adisn's performance campaigns thus generating incremental revenue for CrowdGather. With Adisn, CrowdGather has effectively achieved two objectives: the addition of a sales force for our growing advertising network; and ad server technology that can provide analytics and tracking that are required for higher value advertising campaigns.

Lefora
On July 26, 2010 CrowdGather announced that it had signed a definitive agreement to acquire the technical assets from Lefora, to consolidate CrowdGather's market leadership in the hosted forum market. The CrowdGather network combined with Lefora's hosted forum properties will offer a search engine and social media-friendly network of forum communities that serves over 90 million monthly page views. Lefora has built up a user base of over 100,000 forum communities by virtue of its advanced functionality, combined with the simple user experience. Lefora allows less technical people to start their own community with a form-based editor to set up a forum that is also enabled for social media and search engine optimization. We believe the combination of Lefora's technology and CrowdGather's network and monetization capabilities will make CrowdGather one of the leaders in the hosted forum market by both reach and user experience.

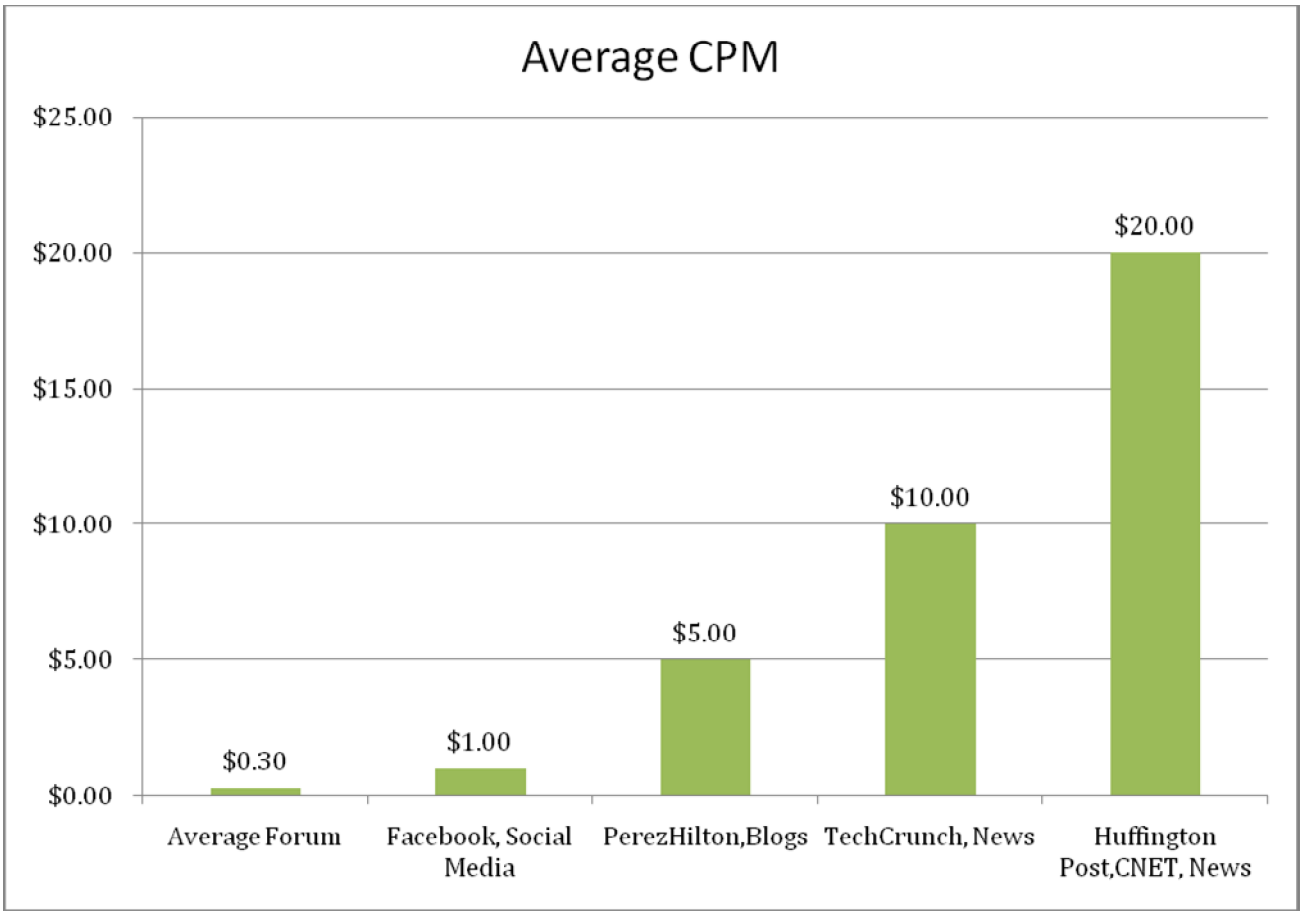

↑Page Hits = ↑Revenue
Based upon current statistics from Google analytics, CrowdGather's network of forums including all recent acquisitions have approximately 90 million monthly page views and 4 to 4.5 million monthly unique visitors Additionally, approximately 5.5 million users have registered on CrowdGather Network sites to date with 5.7 million monthly discussions comprising over 82.5 million individual replies.

*=Estimated

CPM is an internet advertising term that stands for cost per thousand ad views. While the major internet sites such as ESPN, can be as much as $20 CPM forums can be as little as $0.30 to $0.60 this opens the firm up to advertising revenue from both small and large businesses.

With the acquisition of Adisn and Lefora the firm essentially issued $6.5 million in shares in exchange for a substantial increase in revenues and page views. That stake will not be dilutive given the cancellation of 5 million shares of CEO, Sanjay Sabnani's beneficial holdings in CrowdGather. Investors that buy the stock today are essentially getting a firm that is debt free, growing page views at 750% (12 million to 90 million), revenues at a $1.3 million run rate based upon the company's guidance for its' fiscal 2011 first quarter ended July 31, 2010. The company appears to be on track to achieve cash flow break-even before the end of its' 2011 fiscal year and should be EPS positive in fiscal 2012.

According to the Kauffman Index of Entrepreneurial Activity entrepreneurs have remained a strength of the U.S. economy amid one of the worst recessions on record. More entrepreneurs launched new businesses in 2009 than at any other time in the past 14 years. This makes sense from a logical standpoint as well. In the simplest of terms when things get rough entrepreneurs tend to take matters in to their own hands. Small businesses tend to lead economic growth, whereas large firms tend to follow it. Among small businesses, very small businesses (VSB), which the California Association for Micro Enterprise Opportunity (CAMEO) defines as 5 or less employees, come into being to meet immediate and local needs or to develop new or emerging markets by using innovation and technology. They tend to make markets. Large businesses tend to shy away from small or unestablished markets. They most frequently do not make investments until they are fairly certain that markets exist, conducting long studies and spending heavily to break into a market that already has been "pioneered" by smaller and bolder ventures.
