Steelcase Named One of the World's Most Admired Companies

2/1/2021

For the 15th time, the company earned a place on Fortune Magazine's prestigious list and this year, secured the number one spot in the Home Equipment and Furnishings industry sector

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 01, 2021 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Steelcase (NYSE: SCS) has once again landed prominently among the world's leading brands as one of Fortune's 2021 World's Most Admired Companies. This is the 15th year Steelcase has received this designation. In addition, Steelcase has moved up in its category from last year to rank #1 in the Home Equipment and Furnishings industry sector.

Businesses featured on the Most Admired List are rated by executives, directors and analysts in their respective industries based on nine criteria, ranging from investment value and quality of management and products to social responsibility and ability to attract talent.

"This extraordinary recognition is the direct result of our dedicated and innovative team members," said Steelcase President and CEO, Jim Keane. "It's an honor to share this moment with them and with other global leading organizations committed to using their business as a force for good in the world."

Steelcase is a global company whose extensive exploration of the workplace helps it understand how work is changing and how those changes impact people. By applying user-centered research to imagine new possibilities, Steelcase designs and manufactures products for the world's leading organizations so people have better experiences at work. The company partners with other leading brands to enrich its portfolio, increasing the range of options it offers to help customers work, learn and heal.
